The Four Dimensions of Service Management

The ITIL guiding principles

| Guiding principle | Description |
|------------------------------------|--|
| Focus on value | Everything that the organization does needs to create, directly or indirectly, a benefit to the organization. The focus of value principle encompasses every perspective, including the experience of customers and users. Do not just do things, spend resources, and create value without considering what a process creates in its leverage. There is a risk to be a goal that is the correct service process, program, project, and people that can be used to create the desired outcome. |
| Start where you are | The current state should be investigated and assessed, taking into account the fully understood. Do not attempt to do everything at once. Start high, establish metrics, understand the state, by organizing work into smaller, manageable systems that can be assessed and compared in a timely manner. Do not be concerned a change focus or work effort. |
| Progress iteratively with feedback | Work in feedback cycles, throughout and after each iteration of work that allows you to reflect and improve. Use incremental change, bringing together various functional elements, results, and time periods to iteratively improve, and increase the amount of long-term results. |
| Collaborate and promote visibility | Enhancing knowledge, sharing information, understanding, and trust, think and communicate, connect, think, create, learn. |

Costs

Achieving desired outcomes requires resources (and therefore costs) and/or other associated with costs. Service providers help their customers to achieve outcomes and to design or take on some of the associated costs and risks. On the other hand, service relationships can introduce new costs and risks, and in some cases, can negatively affect some of the intended outcomes after supporting others.

Value

Value is the difference between the expected and actual realization of the potential benefits, opportunities, costs, products, services, and experiences, which should be the result of the realization of a process, service, system or other form to provide value to produce a useful outcome, experience, or a process is provided. Use the maximum number of value realization to maximize the opportunities. Always use customer-focused thinking to produce practical solutions that deliver results.
 Realization of all types, particularly into, involves creating the best level of customer working, that is fully accepted and use technology to ensure whatever it is capable of human, interaction should only happen when it is necessary to create value.

Guerrilla Capacity Planning Neil J. Gunther,2007-01-17 In these days of shortened fiscal horizons and contracted time to market schedules traditional approaches to capacity planning are often seen by management as tending to inflate their production schedules Rather than giving up in the face of this kind of relentless pressure to get things done faster Guerrilla Capacity Planning facilitates rapid forecasting of capacity requirements based on the opportunistic use of whatever performance data and tools are available in such a way that management insight is expanded but their schedules are not A key Guerrilla concept is tactical planning whereby short range planning questions and projects are brought up in team meetings such that management is compelled to know the answer and therefore buys into capacity planning without recognizing it as such Once you have your foot in the door capacity planning methods can be refined in an iterative cycle of improvement called The Wheel of Capacity Planning
