Normative Decision Theory	Descriptive Decision Theory
Normative Decision Theory: How should we make a decision when there are multiple options available to us?	Descriptive Decision Theory: How do we actually make a decision when there are multiple options available to us? What factors influence our decision-making process?

Normative decision theory → attempts to describe the underlying ideal processes of decision-making by providing a rational model for strategically choosing alternatives.

How do decision and judgement actually differ?

1. Subjective vs. objective → subjective decisions are based on personal preferences, emotions, and feelings. Objective decisions are based on facts and data.
  - attempting to be objective is a laudable goal, but it's difficult.
2. Emotion vs. logic → emotions can influence decision-making, but logic is essential for making rational decisions.
3. Intuition vs. analysis → intuition is a quick, gut feeling, while analysis is a more deliberate, step-by-step process.
4. Speed vs. accuracy → decisions made quickly are often less accurate, while slower decisions are generally more accurate.

Comparing normative and descriptive decision-making → normative decision-making is based on rational principles, while descriptive decision-making is based on actual human behavior.

Why is it important to understand the difference between these two types of decision-making?

Understanding normative decision-making → helps us to make better decisions by applying rational principles.

Normative Decision Theory

Normative Decision Theory → describes the ideal process of decision-making, based on rational principles. It provides a framework for making decisions that are based on logic and data, rather than emotions and intuition.

1. It provides a framework for making decisions that are based on logic and data, rather than emotions and intuition.
