

Student Exploration: Half-Life

Prior Knowledge Questions (Do these BEFORE using the Gizmo.)

1. What does your teacher tell you about the relationship between the number of atoms of a radioactive substance and the time it takes for half of those atoms to decay?

Time, I think is proportional to amount.

2. If you have 100 atoms of a radioactive substance, how many atoms of that substance would you expect to have after one half-life?

50 atoms, about 50 atoms, that's what I think.

Warm-Up

Like an unopened soda, a radioactive substance has a constant amount of energy at any time. Radioactive atoms change by emitting particles (alpha, beta, or gamma) and losing energy. This process, called decay, reduces the number of atoms in a substance over a certain amount of time.

The half-life of a substance is the amount of time it takes for half of the substance to decay. The unit of time depends on the substance and is often (but not always) years.

Radioactive substance

3. What do you expect to happen?

It will decay proportionally.

Notes: The following simulation shows how a radioactive substance naturally and always decays through successive half-lives.

4. What happens at the end of the first half-life period?

Nothing happens.

5. In the simulation, look at the beginning, middle, and end of the process.

The half-life always is constant in the beginning.
