

Special Senses - Vision

Normally, sensory information is transmitted as a message-carrying action potential to the brain and interpreted accordingly. When triggered, these receptors send action potentials along different pathways to the brain for interpretation. Thus, these specializations of the nervous system allow the body to sense and adjust to changing conditions in the environment very efficiently.

Five basic categories of general sensation that occur across the organism include temperature changes, and mechanical sensations—vibrations, discomfort, numbness. In contrast, the receptors differ specializations—light, hearing, equilibrium, taste/smell—vision is localized, and thereby a distinct special receptor.

Eye and Vision

It captures the light rays (emission) by focusing the appropriate rays to the correct location.

It focuses light rays on the sensitive retina located on an inner eye structure as an equivalent.

The sensitive exposed surface (membrane) the cornea, which is an epithelial-protective membrane layer. Closely associated with the cornea are covering glands (accessory glands) that help to lubricate the eye. Additionally, the eye is being kept with surrounding the entire part of the eyeball is called aqueous humor.

Internally made of the eye is another fluid called by another name for the aqueous humor. Unlike water, which is different color. That, in the absence of any condition, the eye perceives everything as its normal.
