The processes do not occur in the same order, being highly differentiated and dependent on human body functions in an unpredictable and not average length characteristic scale stage of development. This approximate age of a fetus can be determined from its mass and length.

Other important developmental half-year periods follow and include measurements relating to growth. Fetal mass, length, and head circumference are the primary variables that are used to estimate fetal age. The fetus is completely developed for 38 weeks, but the head of the fetus is completely developed for 40 weeks.
