

BASIC GASKET APPLICATION GUIDE & MATERIAL SELECTION

Application / Function

Dynamic gaskets are generally used to seal against the leakage of fluids under conditions of relative motion. These include the 2-groove radial labyrinth seal (type of a gasket with an application in all three seal types) and the seal-in-place seal. A gasket is used to maintain the pressure or vacuum seal of a pipe or a flange throughout the life cycle application. The gasket compresses to fill the irregularities between the mating surfaces of the vessel. This is done by creating a radial force to compress the gasket against the irregularities between the mating surfaces. If the gasket creates radial force for axial and circumferential through the life of the application then radial force is needed for a gasket.

In order to determine the application requirements will require the gasket designer to determine the gasket to select a certain seal. Every gasket application or design has many requirements therefore that must be addressed by specifying the performance of what the gasket is required to do against the application.
