AFTER YOU READ

What are the main differences between the two major political parties? Write your answers in the boxes below.

Political Parties Overview

What is a political party?

A political party is a group of people who share similar views on how to run the country. They work together to elect candidates to office. Political parties are organized to help candidates win elections. They also help to educate voters about the issues.

The two major political parties in the United States are the Democratic Party and the Republican Party. Each party has its own platform and candidates. The Democratic Party is generally more liberal, while the Republican Party is generally more conservative.

Issues and Effects

Political parties have different views on many issues. For example, the Democratic Party is generally more liberal, while the Republican Party is generally more conservative. These differences can lead to different policies and programs.

Political parties also have different views on how to run the government. For example, the Democratic Party is generally more in favor of a larger federal government, while the Republican Party is generally more in favor of a smaller federal government.

Political parties also have different views on how to deal with international relations. For example, the Democratic Party is generally more in favor of international cooperation, while the Republican Party is generally more in favor of unilateral action.

Political parties also have different views on how to deal with social issues. For example, the Democratic Party is generally more in favor of social liberalism, while the Republican Party is generally more in favor of social conservatism.

Political parties also have different views on how to deal with economic issues. For example, the Democratic Party is generally more in favor of government intervention in the economy, while the Republican Party is generally more in favor of free-market economics.

Political parties also have different views on how to deal with environmental issues. For example, the Democratic Party is generally more in favor of environmental protection, while the Republican Party is generally more in favor of economic growth.

These issues are being debated between the two major political parties. The issues that are being debated are very important and will affect the lives of all Americans. It is important for us to understand the differences between the two major political parties and to make our own choices.
