

Comparing Time-Series Clustering Algorithms in R Using the dtwclust Package

Alexis Sardá-Espinosa

Abstract

Most clustering strategies have not changed considerably since their initial definition. The common improvements are either related to the distance measure used to assess dissimilarity, or the function used to calculate prototypes. Time-series clustering is no exception, with the Dynamic Time Warping distance being particularly popular in that context. This distance is computationally expensive, so many related optimizations have been developed over the years. Since no single clustering algorithm can be said to perform best on all datasets, different strategies must be tested and compared, so a common infrastructure can be advantageous. In this manuscript, a general overview of shape-based time-series clustering is given, including many specifics related to Dynamic Time Warping and other recently proposed techniques. At the same time, a description of the `dtwclust` package for the R statistical software is provided, showcasing how it can be used to evaluate many different time-series clustering procedures.

Keywords: time-series, clustering, R, dynamic time warping, lower bound, cluster validity.

1. Introduction

Cluster analysis is a task which concerns itself with the creation of groups of objects, where each group is called a cluster. Ideally, all members of the same cluster are similar to each other, but are as dissimilar as possible from objects in a different cluster. There is no single definition of a cluster, and the characteristics of the objects to be clustered vary. Thus, there are several algorithms to perform clustering. Each one defines specific ways of defining what a cluster is, how to measure similarities, how to find groups efficiently, etc. Additionally, each application might have different goals, so a certain clustering algorithm may be preferred depending on the type of clusters sought (Kaufman and Rousseeuw 1990).

Clustering algorithms can be organized differently depending on how they handle the data and how the groups are created. When it comes to static data, i.e., if the values do not change with time, clustering methods can be divided into five major categories: partitioning (or partitional), hierarchical, density-based, grid-based and model-based methods (Liao 2005; Rani and Sikka 2012). They may be used as the main algorithm, as an intermediate step, or as a preprocessing step (Aghabozorgi et al. 2015).

Time-series is a common type of dynamic data that naturally arises in many different scenarios, such as stock data, medical data, and machine monitoring, just to name a few (Aghabo-

Adopting the Song of Phrase: An Psychological Symphony within Comparing Time Series Clustering Algorithms In R Using The

In some sort of consumed by displays and the ceaseless chatter of instantaneous transmission, the melodic beauty and emotional symphony produced by the prepared word frequently diminish into the backdrop, eclipsed by the relentless noise and disruptions that permeate our lives. But, situated within the pages of Comparing Time Series Clustering Algorithms In R Using The a stunning fictional value full of raw thoughts, lies an immersive symphony waiting to be embraced. Constructed by a masterful musician of language, that fascinating masterpiece conducts viewers on a psychological trip, skillfully unraveling the hidden melodies and profound affect resonating within each cautiously constructed phrase. Within the depths of this emotional evaluation, we will explore the book is central harmonies, analyze their enthralling writing fashion, and surrender ourselves to the profound resonance that echoes in the depths of readers souls.
