

Special Senses - Vision

Normally, sensory information is transmitted as a message-carrying action potential to the brain and interpreted accordingly. When triggered, these receptors send action potentials along different pathways to the brain for interpretation. Thus, these specializations of the nervous system allow the body to sense and adjust to changing conditions in the environment very efficiently.

Five basic categories of general sensation that occur across the organism are: temperature changes, changes in pressure, vibrability, discomfort, numbness. In contrast, the receptors for special senses are: sight, hearing, equilibrium, taste/smell, motion/acceleration, and intensity of various types of stimuli.

Eye and Vision

It interprets the different light wavelengths by detecting the appropriate receptors in the human eye.

It has four main layers that are: sclera, choroid, retina, and vitreous body.

The sclera is the outermost layer of the eye, which is white and tough. The choroid is the middle layer, which is dark and contains blood vessels. The retina is the innermost layer, which is light sensitive and contains the photoreceptors. The vitreous body is the clear, jelly-like substance that fills the eye and helps to maintain its shape.

Light rays enter the eye through the cornea and are focused by the lens onto the retina. The retina contains photoreceptors that convert light into electrical signals that are sent to the brain via the optic nerve.

Sclera - White, tough, fibrous

Choroid - Dark, vascular, middle

Retina - Light sensitive, inner

Vitreous body - Clear, jelly-like

Cornea - Clear, outer

Lens - Biconvex, focuses light
