Abstract

This study develops and empirically tests a conceptual model of customer perceived value and its antecedents and consequences on the social commerce context. The study identifies online service quality and online trust as factors influencing customer perceived value and customer satisfaction as a consequence of customer perceived value in social commerce. A detailed questionnaire was developed to measure the relationship between the aforementioned variables and data was collected from 149 Jordanian web users by email. The data was analyzed using PLS-SEM technique.

The results provided support for the theoretical model of this study. In particular, the study identified that all dimensions of perceived value were found to have a significant effect on customer satisfaction. Specifically, the study found that both social value and information value to have a significant effect on customer satisfaction.

Furthermore, the study identified that online trust and online service quality are factors having direct influence on customer information and social value. It was found, however, that online service quality is the strongest predictor of customer perceived value. Finally the study discusses the implications and scope for future research in the area.

Keywords: Social Commerce, Customer Perceived Value, Information Value, Social Value; Online Trust, online service quality.

Modeling the Effect of the Perceived Value of E-Shopping Experience on the Purchasing Decision Process in the Social E-Commerce Tarek Abdellatif, Chetoui Jenene, 2015. Social networks now present new challenges and opportunities for businesses and consumers. People rely more than ever on their social networks in their decision making. Managers and marketers of the commercial virtual communities are seeking to attract web consumers, make them buy, and retain them. They thus seek to make an enjoyable and unique shopping experience. Then it is appropriate to measure the effect of the perceived value of an e-shopping experience on the decision-making process in the social e-commerce. The aim of our research is to investigate the impact of the perceived value of a social shopping experience on every step of the decision making of online consumers in the social e-commerce while presenting the hypotheses and conceptual model.

research illustrating this To meet our objective and the research questions a quantitative study with 405 volunteers with knowledge of E Commerce and E shopping has been implemented To test the conceptual model established and the various research hypotheses presented below the authors applied the method of structural equation modeling with AMOS 18
