

BIRD BEAK

adaptations

BIRD BEAKS Name: _____

Adaptations are body parts that help a species survive in their environment. Each of the three species described below live in a different environment, which means that they will each have different ways that help them. Read about each of the birds to learn about how their beaks are adapted for their habitats.

Woodpecker
Woodpeckers forage (search) for small bugs in the water. They eat many insects, flies, and worms. Sometimes they also eat small fish. They capture these creatures by conforming to something different in the water with their beaks. Unlike anything else, they come from inside to outside, they take a slightly open to capture any prey. Sometimes woodpeckers may also come at the water or even change their heads under water to grab prey that is deeper below the surface.

Kingfisher
Kingfishers are carnivorous birds whose diet consists mostly of fish. Sometimes they swim and other birds. To capture their prey, kingfishers swoop down from the sky and grab the unsuspecting fish or bird with their beaks (the sharp edges on their feet). When it's time to eat, the kingfisher then goes with one of its beaks and rips the fish off the hook with its beak.

Bird Species	Food (What do they eat?)	Beak (What do they do?)
Woodpecker
King
Hummingbird
Pelican

BIRD BEAKS Name: _____

Pelican
Pelicans have mostly on fish. To catch their prey, pelicans swoop down on a school of fish from above. Their long, pointy beaks are perfect for catching fish. Returning to the air, the pelican will shake the water out of their pointy beaks, leaving the fish.

Sparrow
Sparrows primarily eat small seeds and insects. Their beaks are perfect for their diet. Sparrows are not concerned for being on the ground. Sparrows will often take advantage of a bird feeder where it's common.

Toucan
The toucan is a bird that primarily feeds on fruit. Their long, pointy beaks are perfect for reaching into the canopy to reach fruit on branches that wouldn't support the full weight of their body, and it has rounded edges that help to avoid fruit. It's thought that the toucan's large beak may also play a role in courtship or other social interactions.

BIRD BEAKS

Summarize your findings about each bird and its beak.

Bird Species	Food (What do they eat?)	Beak (What do they do?)
Woodpecker
King
Hummingbird
Pelican

Woodpecker
The woodpecker's beak is strong and the enough to enable it to be used for drilling holes in wood. In order to protect the soft tissue, a thick, springy skin has developed to absorb the impact of the repeated blows. The woodpecker also has a long, sticky tongue that can be used to catch insects from the holes they have drilled.

King
The king is an omnivorous bird who eats insects such as grasshoppers and worms. They have also been known to eat fish, eggs, eggs, and other small birds. The king primarily uses its long beak to probe into the soil or that for insects such as earthworms.

Cyanocephalus
Cyanocephalus feed almost solely on plants, insects, and reptiles. To catch their prey, cyanocephalus will swoop through water with their beak open. When they see their prey, they will close their beak and use it to pierce the muscle that connects the shell. Some species of cyanocephalus also smash the shell open before enjoying the inside.
