Bus Ticketing System Project In Vb Pdf Download:

A Design of an Automated Fare Payment System for Air Conditioned Buses Marvin S. Reyes, 2006 Our current ticketing system involves a puncher like machine and or the paper ticket itself This process takes a lot of time in asking where the passenger's destination is and when giving the change Though some countries like Europe Japan Hong Kong and Singapore use contact less smart card CSC machines they have a different bus transportation system and as a result their ticketing system wouldn't be applicable for us In addition to this some existing designs are bulky and use too many buttons which may cause confusion for the passenger user The proponent has identified four 4 problems in current products These are 1 Current system products are deficient when it comes to Time It takes a lot of time for asking for the fare and giving of the change for every passenger in the bus 2 Current products are deficient when it comes to size Current products are heavy and bulky that they take too much space 3 Current products are deficient when it comes to ergonomics Existing products are efficient but lack comfort and operation may take too much unnecessary energy 4 Current products are deficient when it comes to aesthetics These products appearances present a sense of complication of use due to the excessive application of buttons They also lack the power to communicate the necessary information effectively to the user This project aims to design a ticket issuing machine which is faster accurate and reliable with a modern aesthetic design
