

Activity 1.1 Properties of Matter

Properties of Matter

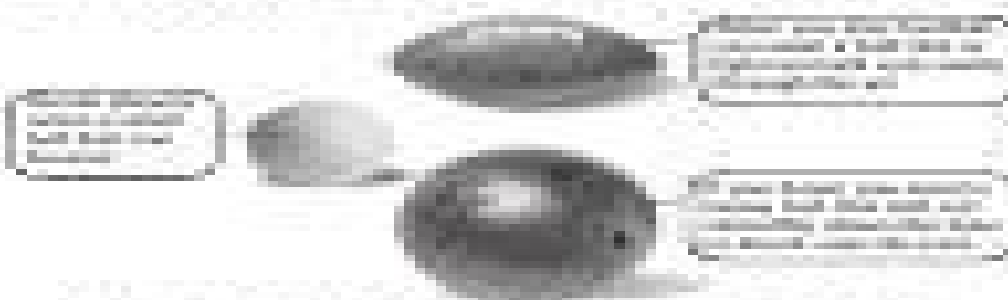

Introduction

Are you able to distinguish between two substances by using

- Only one property, colour, and density (physical properties)?
- Only one characteristic and one or two chemical properties?

What Are Physical Properties?

Look at the table below on the colour below as well as its characteristic properties of two common substances.

Physical properties are characteristics that can be observed without changing the identity of the substance. However, the properties of an object change as it reacts. For example, you can identify an object using colour, shape, size, or weight. However, the properties of an object are determined by the properties of the particles that it is made up of.

Many of the physical properties of materials that make up objects can be measured. These properties include density, hardness, magnetism, and the ability to conduct heat and electricity.

Some physical properties depend on how much of a material you have. In other words, a large amount of a material may have different properties from a smaller amount of the material. Other physical properties do not depend on how much of the material you have. They show that no matter how large or small something is, it still has the same property or always the same
