WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—President John F. Kennedy today ordered a naval blockade of Cuba to prevent the island from receiving Soviet nuclear weapons and other military supplies.

The president's decision, announced in a televised address, was a direct response to the discovery of Soviet nuclear missiles in Cuba. He said the United States would not permit the further buildup of Soviet nuclear weapons in the Western Hemisphere.

Heads of state in both hemispheres today expressed their support for the president's action. The Soviet Union, however, denounced the blockade as an act of aggression.

The president said he would order the sinking of any Soviet ships that defied the blockade. He said the United States would not be provoked into a nuclear war, but he would not allow the Soviet Union to gain a nuclear advantage in the Western Hemisphere.

The president also announced that he would suspend all campaign trips until after the election. He said he would continue to work for the peace and stability of the world.
