

Special Senses - Vision

Normally, sensory information is transmitted as a message-carrying action potential along the body and distributed throughout the brain. When triggered, these messages travel across longways along different pathways within the brain for interpretation. Thus, these specializations of the nervous system allow the body to sense and adjust to changing conditions in the environment very efficiently.

Five basic categories of general sensation that occur across the body are pain, temperature changes, and touch/pressure - vibratory, dullness, numbness. In addition, the senses are specialized to: sight, hearing, equilibrium, taste/smell - vision, hearing, and balance, and olfactory - vision, hearing, and balance.

Eye and Vision

It interprets the different light wavelengths by detecting the appropriate receptors in the human eye.

It has four main parts: the cornea, iris, lens, and retina. The cornea is the outermost part of the eye.

The iris is the colored part of the eye. It controls the amount of light that enters the eye. The lens is a biconvex structure that focuses light on the retina. The retina is the light-sensitive part of the eye. It contains rods and cones that detect light and convert it into electrical signals that are sent to the brain. The optic nerve is the part of the eye that carries these signals to the brain.

Light enters the eye through the cornea and is focused by the lens onto the retina. The retina is the light-sensitive part of the eye. It contains rods and cones that detect light and convert it into electrical signals that are sent to the brain.
