Immigration and Naturalization Act

Immigration and Naturalization Act

What did the Immigration and Naturalization Act do?

In 1988, the Immigration and Naturalization Act (INA) was passed. It changed the way that immigrants enter the United States. It also changed the way that immigrants are treated once they are in the country.

What did the INA do for immigrants?

The INA gave immigrants more rights. It also gave them more protection. It made it easier for them to get a job and to start a business. It also made it easier for them to get a passport and to travel to other countries.

Along with the INA, there were other laws that helped immigrants. These laws made it easier for them to get a job and to start a business. They also made it easier for them to get a passport and to travel to other countries.

The New Immigrants

The new immigrants came from many different places. They had different skills and different backgrounds. Some were doctors and lawyers. Some were teachers and engineers. Some were farmers and workers. They all came to the United States to start a new life.

Why did they come?

They came for many reasons. Some came to find a better life. Some came to escape poverty. Some came to escape war. Some came to escape persecution. They all came to the United States to start a new life.

Some of the new immigrants came from Europe. Some came from Asia. Some came from Africa. Some came from Latin America. They all came to the United States to start a new life. They brought with them their own cultures and traditions. They also brought with them their own skills and talents. They all made a contribution to the United States.

Santos,Mark Naylor,2019-02-14 Secularization as a movement away from a religious orientation to life is strong in Canada and has influence worldwide In this volume missiologists and practitioners across Canada consider how an agenda of Christian mission and evangelism can be advanced in a secularizing environment How can believers be curious and engaged rather than defensive and fearful What changes are required from the evangelical community so that there is productive dialogue and action in ways that maintain faithfulness to the cause of Christ What should the approach of mission be to a new generation steeped in secular narratives How do we answer negative caricatures of Christian mission in light of the history of Residential Schools What examples from the past teach us about developing an irenic approach What positive trends are currently evident in Canada and around the world that counter the secularizing narrative These questions and more are considered in this volume by Canadian scholars who recognize the importance of being relevant to society while maintaining integrity with the Gospel message The essays address secularism in Canadian and worldwide contexts with seriousness insight and an underlying theme of hope recognizing that God s mission has been accomplished is being accomplished and will be accomplished
