

Earthquake Lab

The goal of this portion of the lab is to learn how recording of earthquakes — seismograms — are used to locate earthquakes, determine their magnitudes, and to understand the sense of fault motion related to the earthquake.

Typical seismogram of a small earthquake recorded fairly near the source. The P-waves arrive first and are later swamped by the arrival of the S-waves. The S - P interval is the time between the first arrivals of the P and S waves; it is used to determine the distance from the epicenter. This interaction produces additional seismic waves (phases) which will be detected by seismographs. Refer to Fig. 10.14 in your textbook for an explanation of how seismographs work.

A. Locate the Epicenter

1. Measure the S-P interval from the 3 seismograms shown on the following page, and enter the results in the table below. Then, use the S-P travel time curve (follows the seismogram) to determine the distance between the station and the epicenter and enter the data into the table.

2. Next, take a compass and set its radius to the epicentral distance for each station and draw arcs around each station. Ideally, the three arcs should intersect at a single point, which is the epicenter — if they do not, you should go back and check your work. Clearly mark the location of the epicenter.

3. Is there a known fault in the vicinity of the epicenter that is likely to have slipped to create the earthquake? If so, name the fault.
