Understanding Development Economics Adam Fforde, 2014-01-03 Important parts of development practice especially in key institutions such as the World Bank are dominated by economists In contrast Development Studies is largely based upon multidisciplinary work in which anthropologists human geographers sociologists and others play important roles Hence a tension has arisen between the claims made by Development Economics to be a scientific measurable discipline prone to wide usage of mathematical modelling and the more discursive practice based approach favoured by Development Studies The aim of this book is to show how the two disciplines have interacted as well as how they differ This is crucial in forming an understanding of development work and to thinking about why policy recommendations can often lead to severe and continuing problems in developing countries This book introduces Development Economics to those coming from two different but linked perspectives economists and students of development who are not economists In both explaining and critiquing Development Economics the book is able to suggest the implications of these findings for Development Studies and more broadly for development policy and its outcomes
