the blurring of industry borders managers increasingly recognize the importance of product innovation to a company's survival and growth. This study analyzed the impact of three exogenous constructs: organization technology orientation on the practice and performance of product innovation in organizations. Some key success factors in the management of product innovation were uncovered and guidelines for designing innovation-oriented firms provided. Moore, Daniel L. Plung, 1985. Journal of Marketing, 1997. New Products Management Charles Merle Crawford, C. Anthony Di Benedetto, 2003. NEW PRODUCTS MANAGEMENT 7 E by Crawford and Di Benedetto provides future new product managers, project managers, and team leaders with a comprehensive overview of the new product development process, including how to develop an effective development strategy, manage cross-functional teams across the organization, generate and evaluate concepts, manage the technical development of a product, develop the marketing plan, and manage the financial aspects of a project. Myths and Realities of New Product Forecasting Ugur Yucelt, 1987. Identifying the Key Success Factors in New Product Launch Anthony Di Benedetto, 2014. Effective product launch is a key driver of top performance and launch is often the single costliest step in new product development. Despite its importance, costs and risks, product launch has been relatively underresearched in the product literature. We reviewed the extant literature on product launch to identify the most critical strategic, tactical, and information-gathering activities influencing the launch success. We then used a retrospective methodology to gather managerial perceptions regarding launch activities pertaining to a recent new product launch and the product's performance in terms of profitability, market share, and relative sales. A mail survey of PDMA practitioners elicited data on nearly 200 recent product launches. Successful launches were found to be related to perceived superior skills in marketing, research, sales, force distribution, promotion, R good launch management, and good management of support programs and excellent launch timing relative to customers and competitors. Furthermore, information-gathering activities of all kinds, market testing, customer feedback, advertising, testing, etc. were very important to successful launches. We conclude with observations about current product launch practice and with recommendations to management. Logistics plays a key role in successful strategy development and should receive the requisite amount of managerial attention. In particular, activities involving logistics personnel in strategy development showed much room for improvement. We also find that the timing of the launch, i.e., when the launch is conducted from the point of view of the company, the competition, and the customer, is just as important as whether the activities are performed. More managerial attention should be devoted to launch timing with respect to all of these viewpoints in order to improve the chances of success. The PDMA Handbook of New Product Development Milton D
