

Special Senses - Vision

Normally, sensory information is transmitted as a message-carrying action potential along the body and distributed throughout the brain. When triggered, these messages travel across longways along different pathways within the brain for interpretation. Thus, these specializations of the nervous system allow the body to sense and adjust to changing conditions in the environment very efficiently.

Five basic categories of general sensation that occur across the body are pain, temperature changes, and touch/pressure - vibratory, dullness, numbness. In addition, the senses are specialized to: sight, hearing, equilibrium, taste/smell - vision, hearing, and balance, and olfactory - smell (nose) and olfactory - smell (nose).

Eye and Vision

It captures the light rays (emission) by focusing the appropriate rays to the correct location.

It focuses light rays on the retina (sensory tissue) so that an image is produced in the eye.

The entire system within the eye is called the eye. The eye is a complex organ that captures light rays and focuses them on the retina. The eye is made up of several parts: the cornea, the lens, the iris, the pupil, the retina, and the optic nerve. The cornea is the clear, outer layer of the eye. The lens is a biconvex structure that focuses light rays on the retina. The iris is the colored part of the eye. The pupil is the opening in the center of the iris. The retina is the light-sensitive tissue at the back of the eye. The optic nerve carries the visual information from the retina to the brain.

Light rays enter the eye through the cornea and are focused by the lens on the retina. Light rays enter at different angles. Thus, the light rays are focused on the eye parallel to the optical axis.
