

Porter's Generic Strategies In A Nutshell

According to Michael Porter, a competitive advantage - in a given industry - could be pursued in two key ways: low cost (cost leadership), or differentiation. A third generic strategy is focus (cost focus, differentiation focus). According to Porter a failure to do so would end up "stuck in the middle scenario," where the company will not retain a long-term competitive advantage.

mainly concentrating on the third of his competitive advantage strategies the focus strategy Theory as well as a practical survey was used in order to falsify or approve the research question Theory revealed Porter s focus strategy to have several key advantages over a mass market strategy which make firms pursuing such a strategy more effective in their product promotion efforts First a focused firm does not have to devote substantial resources into being all things to all people entailing less expenditure of time and money in comparison to a mass market strategy Second empirical evidence was found that customers do value specialized firms due to their focused capabilities Third a focused firm is less likely to be overwhelmed by great amount of different customer request and is more likely to identify and adapt to market changes in a quick time manner Besides the advantages of a focus strategy the research question is only supported when the SME makes bigger rivals to accommodate their existence in the segment s by creating circumstances in which the cost for the bigger rival in fighting the SME exceeds the cost of accommodating the SME 27 SMEs from South Germany have returned completed questionnaires which were used to find practical evidence for answering the research question Results revealed several tendencies which partly support theory First SMEs that pursue a focus strategy are more likely to do this with a differ
