After the Civil War, many Americans believed that Reconstruction should be a process of difficulty in restoring the South to its former status. A plan for Reconstruction was drafted by a group of influential Union officers, including General Sherman, and was known as the Reconstruction Plan of 1865. The plan called for the appointment of a Reconstruction Commission to oversee the process. The plan also called for the appointment of a Reconstruction Commission to oversee the process. The Reconstruction Amendments Between 1865 and 1870, three amendments to the Constitution were ratified, which would become known as the Reconstruction Amendments. Numerically, they are the 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments, which gave equal rights to the formerly enslaved. The 13th Amendment abolished slavery, the 14th Amendment granted citizenship to all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and the 15th Amendment prohibited the federal government and the states from denying a citizen the right to vote based on race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

The 13th Amendment passed in Congress on January 31, 1865, a few months before President Lincoln was assassinated. It was first formally ratified on December 6 of that year. The 14th Amendment is considered to be the one which formally ended slavery in the United States.
