Gilhool, 2013-06-24 Jennifer leaped at the opportunity to take her career to the next level. The Salt Mine was growing in Asia Pacific Africa. It needed leaders from the home office in the States to move to China and pull together a cohesive team that could deliver the results the Board of Directors, shareholders, and analysts expected. It was an opportunity to build a team from the ground up, a chance to be the first director in Asia Pacific for her functional organization and one of only three women in leadership roles there. She knew the work would be hard. She would have to put in long hours, travel across the region, be away from her three children and husband for days or weeks at a time. It would be worth the sacrifice, not only for her career but for the opportunity to take her children to China and across Southeast Asia. A once-in-a-lifetime experience for all of them from the challenge of living in a new and very different country to traveling through Malaysian rain forests, Cambodian and Thai temples, and across China itself. But she had not anticipated that it would cost her almost everything: her relationships with her children, her sense of self, and at times her sanity. This first-hand account of journeying into corporate leadership gives readers a unique look inside the real life of an ambitious career woman who leaned in and tried to grasp the brass ring. As Jennifer discovered, not every brass ring is worth reaching for. Leading the Life You Want Stewart

Friedman, 2014-09-16 A Wall Street Journal Bestseller. For nearly thirty years, my life's work has been to help people like you find ways to bring the often warring aspects of life into greater harmony. Stew Friedman from Leading the Life You Want. You're busy trying to lead a full life. But does it really feel full, or are you stretched too thin? Enter Stew Friedman, Wharton professor, adviser to leaders across the globe, and passionate advocate of replacing the misguided metaphor of work-life balance with something more realistic and sustainable. If you're seeking balance, you'll never achieve it, argues Friedman. The idea that work competes with life ignores the more nuanced reality of our humanity: the interaction of four domains—work, home, community, and the private self. The goal is to create harmony among them instead of thinking only in terms of trade-offs. It can be done. Building on his national bestseller Total Leadership and on decades of research, teaching, and practice as both consultant and senior executive, Friedman identifies the critical skills for integrating work and the rest of life. He illustrates them through compelling original stories of these remarkable people: former Bain Company CEO and Bridgespan
