A Reader's Companion to Augustine's Confessions Kim Paffenroth, Robert Peter Kennedy, 2003-01-01 This book is a tool for teaching and studying the great Christian classic Augustine's Confessions It is a unique venture in which thirteen different scholars look at each of the thirteen books in the Confessions and interpret their chapters in light of that book and in light of the rest of Augustine's work The result is that the richness and ambiguity of Augustine's work shines through as well as the richness and ambiguity of different readings of the Confessions

The Culture of Confession from Augustine to Foucault Chloe Taylor, 2010-05-26 This book is a genealogical study of confession Drawing on the work of Michel Foucault as well as the history of Western confessional writings from Ancient Greece to contemporary pop culture this book challenges the transhistorical and commonsense views of confession as an innate impulse resulting in the psychological liberation of the confessing subject On the contrary confessional desire is argued to be contingent and constraining and alternatives to confessional subjectivity are explored

The Tyranny of the Banal David Deane, 2023-06-21 Catholic positions on contested moral issues are rejected by the majority in the secular West and are increasingly rejected by Catholics themselves In this book David Deane argues that there are two main reasons for this First the dominance of secular approaches deprives Catholic positions of their claim to coherence Second the Catholic positions Deane shows have lost contact with the theology on which they were originally based In response Deane undertakes a deconstruction of the dominant secular positions and seeks to restore Catholic positions to their theological roots The result of this is a moral theology reconnected with the Trinitarian understanding of God and God s relationship with the world Restored to its doctrinal foundations the moral theology that Deane offers is more coherent more beautiful and more convincing than has been found in Catholic moral discourse for centuries

Far Calls Daniel Heller-Roazen,2025-09-16 An inquiry into the theories and practices of overhearing When words are not heard but overheard when phrases are perceived in bits and pieces and when speakers failing to do as they intend state things that they never meant to say the saying in its unsteady relation to understanding becomes an event That event has long been studied by a disparate company of interpreters prophets priests and rabbis poets and philosophers linguists psychiatrists and psychoanalysts novelists and filmmakers All have suggested that in the contingencies of discourse there are precious indications to be gleaned for which special techniques are required In Far Calls Daniel Heller Roazen reconstructs such arts of detection interweaving ancient medieval and modern examples From the rituals of the ancient Greeks Jews and Romans to Freud and Lacan from Augustine s catching of a salvific scrap of speech to the inspiration that Breton and Yeats Proust and Joyce drew from profane cries and transmissions Far Calls explores the powers of sonorous coincidence and the varieties of reading that it incites

Confessions was written between AD 397-398 suggesting self-justification as a possible motivation for the work. With the words "I wish to act in truth, making my confession both in my heart before you and in this book before the many who will read it," in Book X, Chapter 1, Augustine both confesses his sins and glorifies God through humility in His grace. The two meanings that define confessions in order to reconcile his imperfections not only to his critics but also to God. Pelagius, a British monk, took exception to Augustine's prayer: "Grant what Thou commandest and command what Thou dost desire." Pelagius recoiled in horror at the idea that a divine gift of grace is necessary to perform what God commands. For Pelagius and his followers, responsibility always implies ability. If man has the moral responsibility to obey the law of God, he must also have the moral ability to do it. Augustine took up the cause of God, clearly demonstrating the fall of man and the inability of man to do good and defend the truth of original sin.
