natural selection changes the range of traits in a population - there are 3 ways it can change. Let's look at a multi population that shows

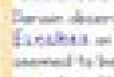

ORIGINAL TOBI POPULATION

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how the theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identified species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed the theory of natural selection.

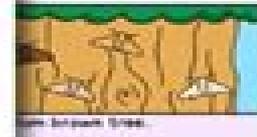

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

A higher proportion of black mice are born in an area with a lot of dark rocks, meaning the beneficial trait is passed on to their offspring.

An example of natural selection!

A population of light brown mice lives on an island of dark rocks. They have two traits:	One day, a hawk comes to hunt for the common variation.
The mice with dark fur are camouflaged against the dark rock where they live.	The light brown mice are more likely to get captured - they are the birds' favorite!
A higher proportion of black mice are born in an area with a lot of dark rocks, meaning the beneficial trait is passed on to their offspring.	Over time, the population has changed as 100% of the mice have black fur.

As the mice eat, some light and some dark against the medium tree trunk, so they will die in numbers, i.e. they are not as fit.

What is it?

movement of genes in or out of a population happens through movement of individuals. The movement of genes is called gene flow. This can bring new alleles into a population or change the frequency of existing alleles.
