Record ,2001 Directions ,1992 New Developments in Ferromagnetism Research V. N. Murray,2005 Ferromagnetism is a form of magnetism that can be acquired in an external magnetic field and usually retained in its absence so that ferromagnetic materials are used to make permanent magnets A ferromagnetic material may therefore be said to have a high magnetic permeability and susceptibility which depends upon temperature Examples are iron cobalt nickel and their alloys

Ultimately ferromagnetism is caused by spinning electrons in the atoms of the material which act as tiny weak magnets They align parallel to each other within small regions of the material to form domains or areas of stronger magnetism In an unmagnetised material the domains are aligned at random so there is no overall magnetic effect If a magnetic field is applied to that material the domains align to point in the same direction producing a strong overall magnetic effect Permanent magnetism arises if the domains remain aligned after the external field is removed Ferromagnetic materials exhibit hysteresis In 2004 it was discovered that a certain allotrope of carbon nanofoam exhibited ferromagnetism The effect dissipates after a few hours at room temperature but lasts longer at cold temperatures The material is also a semiconductor

It is thought that other similarly formed materials of boron and nitrogen may also be ferromagnetic This new book rings together leading research from throughout the world National Educators' Workshop: Update 1997. Standard Experiments in Engineering Materials, Science, and Technology ,1998 The experiments related to the nature and properties of engineering materials and provided information to assist in teaching about materials in the education community
