

Provisions for assessment of existing structures in the second-generation concrete Eurocode

Craig Cicco examines ways in which the second-generation of Eurocode 2 will facilitate the assessment of existing concrete-framed structures.

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) (referred to as EN 1992-1) includes additional provisions that enable it to be used for assessment of existing structures. This article outlines some of these provisions, which are likely to be of assistance when using Eurocode 2 to assess concrete-framed structures. These include:

- determining characteristic material properties for assessment;
- adjusting design loads or factors where testing is used to determine material properties;
- determining values of deterioration;
- load lifting force and anchorage lengths of bar ends;
- dealing with existing structures' capacity to the current situation;
- using gross cross-sections for assessment of their resistance.

Material properties

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) requires characteristic values of material properties to assess the existing structure. Annex E provides guidance for such values to either be taken as-is for assessment, or otherwise using EN 1992-1-1 (2004) to determine their characteristic concrete strength from testing. It provides a range of factors to adjust to determining f_{ck} from f_{cu} , making some provision for situations where testing cannot be completed at the region being assessed. Additional information is provided in the standard to enable characteristic values of steel strength or reinforcement to be determined from testing should steel grades used in the structure not be available from national authorities.

The UK National Annex committee is presently reviewing this factor for determining f_{ck} from f_{cu} . It may encourage such adjustments to the characteristic values to assess agreement with values obtained from EN 1992-1-1 (2004) with the UK National Annex, taking into account the ability to adjust design factors for material in Annex A of the new standard. It may also consider different methods of determining f_{ck} from f_{cu} where gross concrete cross-sections and the region being assessed, such as using the results of laboratory tests, have captured inter-void zones, along with relevant provisions in EN 1992-1-1 (2004).

Partial material factors

Annex E of the new standard provides new guidance for using partial material factors to be adjusted based on material test results from the structure. This should generally reduce the value of these factors, when a low coefficient of variation of material strength is obtained from testing, which is beneficial for assessed members generally. The standard permits test data available from records to also be used where suitable and appropriate.

Deterioration

Provision is made for deterioration of concrete to be taken into account. The spirit of this provision is to take an issue identified with deterioration, but to consider it adverse to the type of deterioration and then apply it as a safety factor. Guidance on when deterioration is considered likely to affect the properties of the test

Plain bars

Plain bars used in concrete EN 1992-1-1 (2004). The standard structures that include Eurocode design detailing of concrete structures. The provisions are based on a new extended-member test of plain bars that was developed during the drafting of the standard (Pillitteri et al.). The provisions also cover the variation of load resulting from subtle steel axes.

Previous guidance on whether test bars suggest that conservative values of anchorage lengths could be used using these provisions in certain circumstances. Other established methods of assessing the bond of plain bars are available in the UK, including those listed by National Highway EN 12518. These may more closely with Eurocode provisions in EN
