natural selection changes the range of traits in a population - there are 3 ways it can change. Let's look at a moth population that shows

Evolution by natural selection

Describe the theory of natural selection and how the theory was first conceived (thought of).

An English naturalist named Charles Darwin went on a voyage around the world. He noticed that animals in similar environments had similar characteristics. For example, in the Galápagos islands, Darwin observed similar but non-identified species of finches on each island. He noticed that their beaks seemed to be adapted to their food source. After some time thinking and the work of other scientists, Darwin developed the theory of natural selection.

Individuals with favorable traits are more likely to survive and reproduce, passing on those traits to their offspring. Over time, the population becomes better adapted to its environment.

Individuals with unfavorable traits are less likely to survive and reproduce, leading to their elimination from the population.

An example of natural selection!

A population of light brown moths lived in an area of dark wood. They had a few red butterflies.	One day a hawk came to hunt for the common variation.
The hawk with dark fur was camouflage against the dark wood where they live.	The light brown moths are more likely to get captured - they are the birds' favorite!
A higher proportion of black moths survived to reproduce, passing on the beneficial trait.	Over time, the population has changed so that most of the moths have black fur.
