Readings in Public Finance Samuel H. Baker,Catherine S. Elliott,1997 This text serves as a useful supplement to public finance textbooks helping students to build and weigh arguments to identify strengths and weaknesses of opposing viewpoints and ultimately to draw their own conclusions Its two main objectives are to present policy issues allowing students an opportunity to apply the theory discussed in class and to show students how material is developed in the literature by having them read some of the classics and contemporary contributions The readings in this book are not tied to any one text The authors make certain via a correlation guide in the front of the text that each selection corresponds to at least one chapter in each of the major textbooks and that no text chapter is without a supplementary reading

Political Economics and Public Finance Torsten Persson,Guido Enrico Tabellini,1999 Observed fiscal policy varies greatly across time and countries How can we explain this variation across time and countries This paper surveys the recent literature that has tried to answer this question We adopt a unified approach in portraying public policy as the equilibrium outcome of an explicitly specified political process We divide the material into three parts In Part I we focus on median voter equilibria that apply to policy issues where disagreement between voters is likely to be one dimensional We thus study the general redistributive programs which are typical of the modern welfare state redistribution between rich and poor young and old employed and unemployed resident of different regions and labor and capital In Part II we study special interest politics Here the policy problem is multi dimensional and we focus on specific political mechanisms we study legislative bargaining lobbying and electoral competition as well as the possible interactions between these different forms of political activity Finally Part III deals with a set of questions that can be brought under the label of comparative politics Here we deal with policy choice under alternative political constitutions we model the rationale for separation of powers and contrast the stylized features of congressional and parliamentary political systems focusing on their implications for rent extraction by politicians redistribution and public goods provision
