

ASPECT	BILLING	MONETIZATION
Core Purpose	Collect revenue from customers—charge payments, issue invoices, handle taxes and receipts.	Define how the product is sold—set price levels, bundle features into tiers, and enforce what each customer gets for what price.
Key Functions	Process transactions (credit cards, etc.), manage subscriptions or one-time charges, apply tax rules, manage refunds & payment failures, financial reporting.	Manage entitlements (which features a user can access), configure plans/tiers, apply usage limits or metering, enable upgrades/downgrades, trials, discounts, bundling add-ons.
Typical Tools/Vendors	Stripe, Paddle, Braintree, PayPal, Chargebee, Recurly, Zuora, etc.—well-established platforms handling payments and billing logic.	Often custom-built or using emerging platforms: e.g., internal “pricing service” or entitlements infrastructure that integrate with the product.
Integration & Complexity	Moderate—integrate via APIs/webhooks. Once set up, billing runs mostly standalone (e.g., charge customer X $Y per month) with minimal product code changes.	High—requires deep integration into product code and databases. Pricing and packaging changes often mean code/config changes affecting user experience, system behavior, customer allowances, and usage tracking.
Primary Owners	Finance or Revenue Operations configure pricing in the billing system; Engineering ensures the API integration is working.	Product and Engineering teams —because changes involve product behavior. Monetization strategy is driven by product managers, growth, or pricing teams but must be implemented by engineers in the product itself.
