

The stock market explained

The stock market is a place for investors and traders to buy and sell shares of publicly listed companies.

Publicly companies will sell shares (representing partial ownership of the company), at stock exchanges like the New York Stock Exchange, the Nasdaq, or the the Toronto Stock Exchange. Most investors and traders will buy and sell shares, through their stock brokerage of choice, like Questrade.

What do investors and traders do with their stocks?

1

Hold onto them, to earn dividends from company profits.

Dividends are corporate earnings that some companies distribute to shareholders. Please note that not all stocks provide dividends.

2

Trade stocks in the stock market, for profit.

Investors and traders will buy and sell shares, to try and lock in profit for when the stock price rises higher than their purchased price.

For every stock trade, there is a buyer and a seller, simply due to supply and demand.
