

Provisions for assessment of existing structures in the second-generation concrete Eurocode

Craig Cicco examines ways in which the second-generation of Eurocode 2 will facilitate the assessment of existing concrete-framed structures.

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) (referred to as EN 1992-1) includes additional provisions that enable it to be used for assessment of existing structures. This article outlines some of these provisions, which are likely to be of assistance when using Eurocode 2 to assess concrete-framed structures. These include:

- determining characteristic material properties for assessment;
- adjusting design loads or factors where testing is used to determine material properties;
- determining values of deterioration;
- load lifting force and anchorage lengths of bar ends;
- dealing with existing structures' capacity to be assessed (see also)
- design rules/provisions for assessment of their resistance.

Material properties

EN 1992-1-1 (2004) requires characteristic values of material properties to assess the material properties. Annex E provides guidance for how users to obtain relevant values for assessment. It introduces what EN 1992-1-1 (2004) to determine the self-characteristic concrete strength from testing. It provides a range of factors to adjust to determine f_{ck} from f_{ctd} (taking some provision for 'statistical' where testing is not to be carried at the region being assessed. Additional information is provided to the standard to enable characteristic values of self strength of reinforcement to be determined from testing should steel grades used in the structure not be available from relevant authorities.

The UK National Annex committee is presently reviewing this factor for determining f_{ck} from f_{ctd} . It may require some adjustments to the characteristic values to assess agreement with values obtained from EN 1992-1-1 (2004) and the UK National Annex, taking into account the ability to adjust design factors for material in Annex A of the new standard. It may also consider different methods of determining f_{ck} from f_{ctd} where some concrete has been used in the region being assessed, such as using the results of laboratory tests made on aged concrete cylinders, along with relevant provisions in EN 1992-1-1 (2004).

Partial material factors

Annex E of the new standard provides new guidance for where partial material factors to be adjusted based on material test results from the structure. This should generally reduce the value of these factors, where a low coefficient of variation of material strength is obtained from testing, which is beneficial for assessed members generally. The standard permits test data available from records to also be used where suitable and appropriate.

Deterioration

Provision is made for deterioration of concrete, which is generally an issue. The rest of the standard has to take all issues associated with deterioration, but in assessing structures for typical types of deterioration and their impact. It also clearly provides guidance on when assessment of reinforcement is likely to affect the provision of the test.

Other items

There have been a number of changes to EN 1992-1-1 (2004). The standard introduces the 'finite element method' designed to assess structures. The provisions are based on a new extended-member model of steel, that was developed during the drafting of the standard (Pohlmann et al.). The provisions also cover the variation of load resulting from variable dead loads.

Provision is made for where test results suggest that conservative values of ultimate lengths must be used using these provisions in certain circumstances. Other established methods of assessing the bond of steel bars are available in the UK, including those listed by National Highway (2004). These may more closely with British provisions in EN
