Constructivist Practice for English Language Learners

onstructivist practice can be powerful for ELLs. Second language teachers know that instructional practice must be modified for second language learners when they are engaged in content learning in their L2. The distance between mainstream and second language teachers is not that large; language learning is about curriculum, and, after all, it is curriculum that drives second language acquisition. Just as Cummins (1978) posits that knowledge transfers across languages, Bransford and colleagues (2000) hypothesize that knowledge transfers across contexts and that the expert is able to reconstruct this knowledge in different settings. We encourage mainstream educators to transfer their knowledge of constructivist practice and reconstruct it in the service of ELLs.

The integration of second language learning with content learning makes it possible for constructivist teachers to simultaneously accommodate the needs of both mainstream students and ELLs because constructivist second language classrooms integrate language, content, and process. For ELLs who are learning in their L2, however, modifications are needed to maximize educational success. Sheltered instruction is a modification that
