Doing Gender. Social Construction of Gender in School ,2022-02-02 Seminar paper from the year 2011 in the subject Gender Studies grade 1 3 Leuphana Universit t L neburg language English abstract Gender role behavior is learned from an early age and encouraged by the role expectations of the environment Thinking in two sexes results in ideas and expectations in every human being as to how one s own or the opposite sex should be or behave These ideas are a formative and formative element in interaction and communication In this way gender is constantly being produced as a social construction in everyday life This process is called Doing Gender The institution of school is also a social system in which the construction of gender plays an important role As part of this work the topic of Doing Gender in primary school is dealt with The aim is to work out how teachers contribute to the construction of gender in primary school There are only a few studies on this not entirely uncomplicated field of school research to date This is surprising since teachers play an important role in the design of everyday school life First a basis for the further procedure is created by defining the terms gender and doing gender The next chapter deals in more detail with gender in primary school For this purpose the gender differences in terms of performance and interactions between pupils and teachers are also discussed Afterwards teaching examples will be used to show how Doing Gender takes place at school The last chapter explains how gender differences and stereotyping can be avoided by means of a gender sensitive school atmosphere For this purpose it is first presented what constitutes a gender sensitive school what challenges arise for the teachers and how the blockages to gender sensitive action can be put an end to

Seeing Nature Through Gender Virginia Scharff, 2003 Environmental history has traditionally told the story of Man and Nature Scholars have too frequently overlooked the ways in which their predominantly male subjects have themselves been shaped by gender Seeing Nature through Gender here reintroduces gender as a meaningful category of analysis for environmental history showing how women's actions desires and choices have shaped the world and seeing men as gendered actors as well In thirteen essays that show how gendered ideas have shaped the ways in which people have represented experienced and consumed their world Virginia Scharff and her coauthors explore interactions between gender and environment in history Ranging from colonial borderlands to transnational boundaries from mountaintop to marketplace they focus on historical representations of humans and nature on questions about consumption on environmental politics and on the complex reciprocal relations among human bodies and changing landscapes They also challenge the ecofeminist position by challenging the notion that men and women are essentially different creatures with biologically different destinies Each article shows how a person or group of people in history have understood nature in gendered terms and acted accordingly often with dire consequences for other people and organisms Here are considerations of the ways we study sexuality among birds of William Byrd's masking sexual encounters in his account of an eighteenth century expedition of how the ecology of fire in a changing built environment has reshaped firefighters own gendered identities Some are playful as in a piece on the evolution of snow bunnies to shred betties Others are dead serious as in a chilling portrait of how endocrine disrupters are reinventing humans animals and water systems from the cellular level out Aiding and adding significantly to the enterprise of environmental history Seeing Nature through Gender bridges gender history and environmental history in unexpected ways to show us how the natural world can remake the gendered patterns we've engraved on ourselves and on the planet
