Name:

Date: 11/11/21

Entry Number: Henrietta Lacks and HeLa Cells
Text Henrietta Lacks was a poor, uneducated African American woman who died of cervical cancer in 1951. Her cells, which were taken from her tumor, became the first immortal human cell line, known as HeLa cells. These cells have been used in countless scientific experiments, including the development of the polio vaccine, the discovery of the structure of DNA, and the development of the AIDS virus. HeLa cells are also used in the production of many pharmaceuticals and in the study of cancer and aging.

Summary/Response:

Henrietta Lacks' story is a powerful reminder of the ethical implications of scientific research. Her cells, which were taken from her without her consent, have become one of the most valuable tools in modern biology. This raises questions about the rights of individuals whose cells are used in research, and the potential for exploitation of vulnerable populations. It also highlights the importance of informed consent and the need for strict ethical guidelines in the use of human cells in research.
