

The Constitution of the United States

The Constitution is the plan of government for the United States. It details the country's type of government, the government's powers, and citizens' rights and freedoms.

The Constitution was written and signed in 1787. James Madison, known as the "Father of the Constitution," made many important contributions to the document.

The Constitutional Convention, led by George Washington, began in May of 1787. The delegates' goal was to revise the Articles of Confederation. In the end, however, they drafted the Constitution of the United States.

The first 10 amendments make up the Bill of Rights. These amendments guarantee people their basic rights and protect those rights from government interference.

The Amendment Process

During its over 200-year history, the Constitution has only been amended (changed) 27 times. Article V of the Constitution details how the document can be amended.

AMENDMENT PROPOSAL

Amendment is proposed by a two-thirds vote in both houses of Congress.

Amendment is proposed at a national constitutional convention organized by two-thirds of the state legislatures.

AMENDMENT RATIFICATION

Amendment is ratified by three-fourths of the state legislatures.

Amendment is ratified at three-fourths of the special conventions held by the states.

THE CONSTITUTION IS AMENDED.

The History of the U.S. Constitution

From 1781 to 1789, the United States functioned under the Articles of Confederation. The lack of a strong central government under the Articles led to disagreements among the states. As a result, in May of 1787, 55 of the 13 original states sent delegates to a convention in the Pennsylvania State House (now called Independence Hall). Their goal was to amend the Articles, but they ended up drafting a new constitution.

For more than two months, the House of Representatives and the Senate led by George Washington, presided over the drafting of the Constitution in 1787.

One of the delegates' challenges was deciding whether slaves' representation in Congress would be divided equally or based on population. The others eventually agreed on a compromise. A state's number of representatives in the House is based on population. Each state has two senators.

Thirty nine delegates, including George Washington, signed the Constitution.
