Economics and Ecology of Diversification François Ruf,Götz Schroth,2015-09-23 The monoculture systems that have been encouraged by governments since the 1960s have led to major socio economic and environmental crises Now the diversification of tree crop systems is advancing throughout the tropics Why and when does diversification take place What categories of farmers diversify What obstacles do they have to overcome and how do public and private policies interfere in this process How do land use systems and landscapes evolve as a result of this diversification According to the authors of this volume diversification is certainly a response to market risks but also to the depletion of environmental resources Ecological changes such as declining soil fertility and increasing pressure from pests diseases and weeds intensify at the end of monoculture cycles driving crop change and diversification of farming systems Through 15 case studies from Africa Latin America Asia and the Pacific the authors provide us with in depth insights into the economy and ecology of family agriculture and its recent developments

New,2018-08-27 Losses of forests and their insect inhabitants are a major global conservation concern spanning tropical and temperate forest regions throughout the world This broad overview of Australian forest insect conservation draws on studies from many places to demonstrate the diversity and vulnerability of forest insects and how their conservation may be pursued through combinations of increased understanding forest protection and silvicultural management in both natural and plantation forests The relatively recent history of severe human disturbance to Australian forests ensures that reasonably natural forest patches remain and serve as models for many forest categories They are also refuges for many forest biota extirpated from the wider landscapes as forests are lost and merit strenuous protection from further changes and wider efforts to promote connectivity between otherwise isolated remnant patches In parallel the recent attention to improving forest insect conservation in harmony with insect pest management continues to benefit from perspectives generated from better documented faunas elsewhere Lessons from the northern hemisphere in particular have led to revelations of the ecological importance and vulnerability of many insect taxa in forests together with clear evidence that conservation can work in concert with wider forest uses A brief outline of the variety of Australian tropical and temperate forests and woodlands and of the multitude of endemic and often highly localised insects that depend on them highlights needs for conservation both of single focal species and wider forest dependent radiations and assemblages The ways in which insects contribute to sustained ecological integrity of these complex ecosystems provide numerous opportunities for practical conservation
