Entry Number: Henrietta Lacks and HeLa Cells
Text Henrietta Lacks was a poor, uneducated African American woman who died of cervical cancer in 1961. Her cells, which were taken from her tumor, became the first immortal human cell line, known as HeLa cells. These cells have been used in countless scientific experiments, including the development of the polio vaccine, the discovery of the structure of DNA, and the development of the AIDS virus. HeLa cells are also used in the production of many vaccines and in the study of cancer and other diseases.	Personal Response: Henrietta Lacks' story is a powerful reminder of the ethical implications of scientific research. Her cells have been used in countless experiments, but she herself has never been acknowledged or compensated. This raises important questions about the rights of individuals whose bodies are used in research. It also highlights the importance of informed consent and the need for strict ethical guidelines in the use of human tissue.
