BIRD BEAKS Name: _____

Adaptations are body parts that help a species survive in their environment. Each of the three species described below live in a different environment, which means that they will each have different body parts that help them. Read about each of the birds to learn about how their beaks are adapted for their habitats.

Robin
Robins forage (search) for small bugs in the water. They eat watery insects, flies, and worms. Sometimes they also eat small fish. They capture these creatures by conforming to something different in the water with their beaks. Unlike anything else, they come from inside to outside, they take a slightly open to capture any prey. Sometimes robins may also catch at the water or even change their heads under water to grab prey that is deeper below the surface.

Loon
Loons are carnivorous birds whose diet consists mostly of fish. Sometimes they eat tadpoles too. To capture their prey, loons hover above from the sky and grab the unsuspecting fish or tadpoles with their beaks (the sharp edges on their beak). When it's time to eat, the loon holds the prey with one of its beaks and uses the back of the lower jaw to tear the flesh off the bones with its tongue.

Their beak is long enough to reach fruit on branches that wouldn't support the full weight of their body, and it has rounded edges that help to peel fruit. It's thought that the toucan's large beak may also play a role in courtship or both sexes.

The woodpecker's beak is strong and the enough to enable it to be used for drilling holes in wood. In order to protect the soft tissue, a thick, spongy pad has developed to absorb the impact of the repeated blows.
