

CHAPTER 19 PARTNERSHIPS: FORMATION AND OPERATION

Chapter Outline

1. Business organizations that are formed legally as partnerships, although they are not always so called in conversation, are governed throughout the country, regardless of the legal tradition, upon partnership principles.
 - a. Advantages of the partnership form include ease of creation and the absence of the double taxation often inherent in the limited liability of a corporation and limited to partners.
 - b. Partnership taxation tends to be simpler and better integrated with other business organizations, especially in cases of the unincorporated family trust, partnership, and general partner.
 - c. Partnership legal forms have been created over the years to combine the benefits of corporations and partnerships such as S corporations, limited liability partnerships, and limited liability companies.
2. Partnership accounting and the capital account
 - a. The historical aspects of partnership accounting center on the capital account maintained by each individual partner.
 - b. The issue of accounting for these capital interests in the context of partnership agreement, asset distribution, procedure for asset distribution, withdrawal, admission of a new partner, retirement of a partner, etc.
 - c. The most common issue is the payment to the partners of the business assets as reported on the capital account. A partner's share, however, often is computed in only one of two ways as a particular aspect of an individual's share issue.
 - i. In the historic method, the partner's share is based on the reported net capital account and the agreed distribution percentage of the total partnership being used for distribution.
 - ii. In the goodwill method, the amount being distributed and the corresponding percentage of the total capital interest are used to calculate the value of the business and the percentage goodwill or paid-up amount previously reported as an original asset.
3. Partnership share allocation
 - a. At the end of each fiscal period, the receipts and expenses accounts must be closed out with the resulting netted figure being assigned to the individual capital accounts.
 - b. The method of allocating income to the capital accounts should be consistent with the nature of partnership.
