itself is a teacher alongside agentic materials and the self-revelatory process of creation. Once the category of teacher is opened to include geometric configurations, we see how they could model actions. Nevertheless, viewers must do for themselves. The Inka state carefully choreographed the contexts of viewing so as to encourage imperial subjects to think through and within design, locating themselves within networks of relationships on multiple scales. In this way, non-objective configurations served the Inka's imperial goals, dependent on an acceptance of and submission to Inka order. It's important to understand that relationships and ideas reflected in the designs are not, as Dean suggests, narrowly static but rather open-ended. Two viewers might see different obligations in the designs, depending on where the viewer fits into Inka society, but the underlying principles and general submission to an Inkan worldview are consistent. Ifè Oyin Ogunba, 2018 LASU Journal of Humanities, 2016 The Convergence of the Performing and Creative Arts Sooi Beng Tan, 2013. This edited volume forms a compilation of new works on architecture, fine arts, crafts, film, music, dance, theatre, new media, design, advertising, publishing, research and development, software, television, and radio, which look at the dynamics and impact of the convergence of the arts within the context of the creative industries. They debate issues of engaging audiences through convergence, participation, collaboration, and agency in the transformation of traditions, creation of alternative methodologies, education, digital media, and design, as well as representation in the creative arts. This book promotes dialogue between and across disciplines, with a focus on the varied historical, cultural, and technological settings in different parts of the world in which convergence is located. The proceedings describe some of the ways that convergence is restructuring culture and society and the relationship between audiences, producers, and content in Asia. Convergence involves changes in the methods culture is created and consumed. Preface and acknowledgements The Greenwood Encyclopedia of World Popular Culture Gary Hoppenstand, 2007.
