ABSTRACT

The ultimate objective of this study was to determine the factors affecting senior high school students' poor academic performance at San Ildefonso National High School, Poblacion, San Ildefonso, Bulacan. The study utilized mixed-method research in which descriptive design was employed. Standardized survey questionnaires and personally crafted open-ended questions were the data gathering tools. The respondents of the study were the 100 purposively selected Grade 12 students. Quantitative data were processed using mean procedure while thematic analysis, frequency and percentage were used to analyze the qualitative data. The findings revealed that school-related aspects, home-related aspects, and personal condition are the factors that affect their poor academic performance. Furthermore, students encounter several challenges academically. Moreover, a number of conclusions and recommendations were formulated based on the findings of the study.

I. INTRODUCTION

Academic performance talks about how students are accomplishing his or her responsibilities and studies. There are some factors that determine the status and the rate of students' learning performance. Ability is a talent, skills, or proficiency in a particular area of discipline. It is what students can do, given the ideal circumstance. Many can think of it as being internal and hidden until they show their knowledge and skills through various learning tasks. According to Singh (2016), educational students are the most important asset. The students' academic performance plays a vital role in producing the outstanding quality individuals who will become leaders and manpower of a particular country, consequently responsible for the country's social and economic development. The academic performance of the students has gained significant attention from past researchers. Previous studies on academic performance of students focused on such issues like teacher education, family, educational background, gender difference and socio-economic factor. Additionally, as emphasized by Shakeel and Peterson (2020), one of the most significant parts of human resource development is education. Academic performance is the basis of student achievement across various academic subjects. Teachers and education officials typically assess achievement using classroom performance, graduation scales, and results from standardized tests. Students' academic performance is affected by several factors: students' learning skills, parental background, peer influence, teachers' quality, and learning infrastructure. Despite the promising objectives set by the Philippine government, various issues have prompted the reform's implementation. For instance, they found misalignments between established learning pedagogies with the expected results of the curriculum guidelines of the Philippines (Rivera, 2017; Barrot, 2018). However, with the shared movement of other countries towards globalization, the Philippines has started major educational reforms, that transition and shift of its 10-year primary education into the K-12 curriculum (Di Natale et al., 2020). As cited in the study of Ozcan (2021), it is a fact that the student's academic achievement, which is one of the most basic and essential aims of education institutions, is also an expectation of society. Therefore, when education systems are setting their goals and objectives, they take academic achievement into consideration alongside several competences. Achievement is progress made towards attaining one's goals. In other words, achievement can be expressed as progress made towards attaining the goals determined by individuals or institutions. In terms of the student, achievement means reaching the objectives framed in the curriculum. In education institutions, however, the aim of this achievement is to improve and advance academically. A study conducted communicates that when someone's concept of self matches what they feel, think, and do then they can realize their maximum potential (Cavilla, 2017; Al Kurdi, 2021). Meanwhile, students having ideal motivation showed a certain advantage compared to the rest of their peers because they tend to have adaptive attitudes and keep modifying their strategies based on the workload,

Ensuring the Success of Latino Males in Higher Education Victor B. Sáenz, Luis Ponjuán, Julie L.

Figuroa, 2023-07-03 Latino males are effectively vanishing from the American higher education pipeline Even as the number of Latinas/os attending college has actually increased steadily over the last few decades the proportional representation of Latino males continues to slide relative to their Latina female counterparts The question of why Latino males are losing ground in accessing higher education relative to their peers is an important and complex one and it lies at the heart of this book There are several broad themes highlighted catalogued along with the four dimensions of policy theory research and practice The contributors to this book present new research on factors that inhibit or promote Latino success in both four year institutions and community colleges in order to inform both policy and practice They explore the social cultural factors peer dynamics and labor force demands that may be perpetuating the growing gender gap and consider what lessons can be learned from research on the success of Latinas This book also closely examines key practices that enable first generation Latino male undergraduates to succeed which may seem counterintuitive to institutional expectations and preconceived notions of student behavior Using narrative data the book also explores the role of family in persistence outlines how Latino men conceptualize fulfilling expectations negotiate the emasculation of the educational process and how they confront racialization in the pursuit of a higher education uncovers attitudes to help seeking that are detrimental to their success and analyzes how those who succeed and progress in college apply their social capital whether aspirational navigational social linguistic familial or resistant While uncovering the lack of awareness at all levels of our colleges and universities about the depth and severity of the challenges facing Latino males this book provides the foundation for rethinking policy challenges leaders to institutionalize male focused programs and services and presents data to inform needed changes in practice for outreach and retention

Factors Affecting Academic Performance Julio Antonio González-Pianda, 2017 Nowadays society is constantly changing and new ways of life are being developed by due to nonstop technological advancements This generates changes in family schools the media etc New technologies are creating virtual environments to manage learning and academic achievement and this is a new challenge to approach formal and informal education In the last few decades teachers families and educational administrators had very well defined fields of action and roles to play Now these roles are disfigured and influences from all agents are arguable and more difficult to face At this current stage problems sometimes appear that require different forms of intervention Some of the problems are violence towards people child abuse drug abuse at increasingly early ages integration problems due to immigration dropping out of school and typical problems related to student development personality disabilities social and psychical maladjustment teenagers socioaffective relationships etc Research on school success and failure has a long history but there is still no agreement concerning the prevalence of these variables to explain academic achievement the relationship between those variables and which other variables modulate their level of impact For many years cognitive psychology has emphasized cognitive function as the most relevant for learning in school However recent studies highlight the importance of motivational and affective functions in building consistent models to explain learning and academic achievement This change of perspective from the classical cognitive model to a self regulated learning model has implied a new orientation in the research of the factors involved in school success and failure Self regulated learning models try to integrate students cognitive socioaffective and behavioral aspects These models describe the different components involved in successful learning at all school stages explaining reciprocal relationships between those components and directly relating learning to personal achievement motivation volition and emotions With this new paradigm students not only contribute to strengthening their intelligence but also their motivational and emotional qualities all related to achieving personal balance This book presents studies ideas and recommendations to shed light on the complex educational world Education has limits and difficulties but it is also the only instrument that can develop students

potential into personal success
