Use the text and discussion material throughout the assignment to answer the questions.

Answer 2. Answering questions 3 through 6 requires a critical reading of the text.

1961	President John F. Kennedy's inaugural address. “...I believe that this nation stands for the freedom of all men—free men who are able to govern themselves, who are able to perform the work of the modern world, who are able to make a life of their own out of their own hands and brains and who are responsible for their own destiny. For such men we regard the United States as a great hope and a great danger. For such men we regard the United States as a great friend and a great foe. For such men we regard the United States as a great ally and a great enemy. For such men we regard the United States as a great power and a great responsibility. For such men we regard the United States as a great challenge and a great opportunity. For such men we regard the United States as a great dream and a great reality. For such men we regard the United States as a great ideal and a great goal. For such men we regard the United States as a great hope and a great danger.
