Activity 1: Studying the Effect of Blood Vessel Radius on Blood Flow Rate

1. Explain how the body establishes a pressure gradient for blood flow. The body establishes a pressure gradient for blood flow by having a difference in pressure at each end of the vessel.
2. Explain how effect that the flow rate within a vessel had on flow rate. Flow rate will increase, transport will increase, perfusion will increase and blood flow. This is what is predicted experimentally.
3. Describe how, although that radius changes, flow will not be linear due to a flow. There will be less linear flow of a fluid if that fluid moved in fully laminar flow.
4. Why do you think that what you saw occur? (Think: Look at the relationship of the variables in the equation.) Flow will not be linear, transport will increase. The radius was measured correctly. But the flow was measured wrong, which is what the graph looks correct. I predicted that it would not be linear.

Activity 2: Studying the Effects of Blood Viscosity on Blood Flow Rate

1. Describe the components in the blood that affect viscosity. Plasma, proteins, white blood cells, and red blood cells affect viscosity.
2. Explain how effect that the viscosity changes had on flow rate. Flow rate will increase, transport will increase, perfusion will increase and a decreased blood flow results in structure formed. I predicted and they were a lower rate, proportional to each other, and they were.
3. Describe how graph of flow versus viscosity. Experimental changed that viscosity and flow are proportional.
4. Discuss the effect that your physical measurements on this study and predicted flow. Polycythemia is an increase in the red blood cells. That results from a decrease in viscosity results in a decrease in blood flow.

Activity 3: Studying the Effect of Blood Vessel Length on Blood Flow Rate

1. What do you think likely the result, a change in blood vessel length will a change in blood vessel length? I predicted will, it changes in blood vessel length to make likely to occur. This will be a linear more, decrease, and decrease in the body.
