

Newton's First Law of Motion: Inertia

Newton's first law states that an object will remain at rest or in uniform motion in a straight line unless acted upon by an external force. This law is often referred to as the law of inertia. It states that an object will not change its state of motion unless a net force is applied to it. For example, a ball at rest will remain at rest unless a force is applied to it, and a ball in motion will continue to move in a straight line at a constant speed unless a force is applied to it.

Newton's first law is often stated as follows: "An object at rest stays at rest and an object in motion stays in motion with the same speed and in the same direction unless acted upon by an unbalanced force."

The concept of inertia is related to the mass of an object. The greater the mass, the greater the inertia. This means that a larger object will be harder to start moving or to stop moving than a smaller object.

Newton's first law is a special case of his second law, which states that the net force on an object is equal to the mass of the object multiplied by its acceleration. When the net force is zero, the acceleration is zero, and the object's velocity remains constant.

Answer the questions below to test your understanding of Newton's first law of motion.

1. A ball is at rest on a table. What force is keeping it at rest? _____
2. A ball is moving to the right. What force is keeping it moving? _____
3. A ball is moving to the right. What force is stopping it? _____
4. A ball is moving to the right. What force is changing its direction? _____
5. A ball is moving to the right. What force is changing its speed? _____
6. A ball is moving to the right. What force is changing its acceleration? _____
7. A ball is moving to the right. What force is changing its velocity? _____
8. A ball is moving to the right. What force is changing its momentum? _____
9. A ball is moving to the right. What force is changing its energy? _____
