Abstract

While the last few years have witnessed a significant increase in the number of articles on information technology in the field of education, this paper will instead be the product of the authors' experience in applying to several higher education institutions. The authors' research suggests that the current practice within these three types of institutions is generally less than ideal. While various solutions are available, the authors believe that the most effective solution is to provide a more holistic approach to the use of information technology in the workplace. This article discusses some of the challenges and opportunities associated with the use of information technology in higher education and offers some suggestions for addressing these challenges and opportunities.
