EU and CARICOM Alicia Elias Roberts, Stephen Hardy, Winfried Huck, 2020-10-12 Investigating the unique EU CARICOM legal relationship this book explores the major theme of globalisation which shapes inter regional organisations individually and determines their relationship to one another It evaluates how EU CARICOM relations have fostered trade security and other development measures reflecting on the past future and present of the Caribbean states that are active in the EU CARICOM framework Providing case studies on key issues such as immigration tax and energy it examines the impact that the EU CARICOM has on the slave trade and the deportation of millions of people Such bitter experiences still indirectly shape culture hopes and the economic framework of possibilities today therefore the focus of the volume is on the issues which the constant stream of globalisation creates The book assesses many potential impacts that the agenda of the EU and Brexit pending will have upon the EU CARICOM relationship given the potential for these to create instability Overall it highlights how the EU and CARICOM are representations for multilateralism and serve as models that provide the basis for many successful initiatives and agreements. In all new agreements and negotiations the will to accept the Sustainable Development Goals and thus to make inequality, climate change and other goals of the SDGs the basis of an order that puts people at the centre are evaluated and the global agenda 2030 and its impact on EU CARICOM. Implementing Climate Change Policy Ottavio Quirico, Walter F. Baber, Michael A. Adams, 2026-02-21. Over a time lapse of only about 170 years the trajectory of greenhouse gas (GHG) in the atmosphere has exceeded the 1.5°C security level established in the Paris Agreement. States and international organisations have thus far addressed global warming primarily by means of policy making and law making that is from the standpoint of primary rules but convergence is still limited. Climate science indeed warns that the timely achievement of carbon neutrality by 2050 currently necessitates drastic cuts in GHG emissions on a yearly basis. Can therefore a progressive implementation of secondary norms that is sanctions and ensuing enforcement procedures meaningfully contribute to fostering a fast transition to a low carbon economy based on renewables and possibly nuclear energy and further innovative technologies including corresponding adaptation measures? Hard and soft mechanisms both public and private in nature whereby enforceable sanctions integrate goal setting, pledges and a variety of behavioural incentives disclose a fragmented enforcement deficit which compels case by case decentralised solutions whereby the threshold is by now set at a 2°C temperature increase above pre industrial levels with fast approaching tipping points.
