

Colour

Colour is often one of the most exciting components of a painting, but what exactly is it? Understanding the basic principles of colour theory helps you analyse how artists exploit and manipulate it to their work. They use colour together with composition, perspective, and light and shade to strengthen the impact of the artwork itself.

Mixing and comparing colours

The spectrum of light makes colour visible. Light from a source of different angles, either pure and homogeneous or from a mixture of different colours. The range of wavelengths perceived can be related to the spectrum: the shorter the wavelength, the more violet and the longer the wavelength, the more red. The spectrum also gives us a guide to the different wavelengths and their effect on the eye. The spectrum is divided into two parts: the visible spectrum and the invisible spectrum.

The colour wheel

Colour relationships are defined by the colour wheel. It is a circular diagram that shows the relationships between the primary and secondary colours. The primary colours are red, yellow and blue. The secondary colours are green, cyan and magenta. The tertiary colours are orange, red-violet and blue-violet. The colour wheel is a useful tool for understanding the relationships between colours and for creating a harmonious colour palette.

Primary and secondary

The primary colors are red, yellow and blue. The secondary colors are green, cyan and magenta. The tertiary colors are orange, red-violet and blue-violet.
