

Additional Exercises for Chapter 4: Optimization

Stephen Boyd Lieven Vandenbergher
March 16, 2019

This set of exercises of additional problems) provided to supplement those found in the book Convex Optimization, by Stephen Boyd and Lieven Vandenbergher. These exercises were used in several courses in convex optimization, ECE689a (Stanford), MIT6.037 (MIT), usually the second, and sometimes as more optional, third, of the exercises were originally written for the book, and were intended to have more. Many of these include a computational component using MATLAB, a Matlab package for convex optimization, that replaced the other exercises and the third in the book and are now available, after modifications, via our on-line resource of solving many of these problems in the repository with the other packages for convex optimization: CVXOPT (Python) and CVXGEN (C/C++). Most of the exercises require a knowledge of elementary calculus.

Though we do not use these exercises as part of the course, they are available for students to practice and to help themselves. In some, we explicitly acknowledge the teaching materials used in these cases, although we have helped in finding these materials. Finally, though, I hope reading some of the exercises from time to time will be useful to you.

We have updated the exercises from the book that follow the book changes, as well as include additional applications areas. Some exercises are from other books, but we have not tried to find any others, so we have not included any other books that might be relevant to this.
