

The Right Ball FORE You

Hypothesis

The amount of water that will be absorbed by a plant will be directly related to the amount of light it receives. I predict that the plant that receives the most light will absorb the most water.

Plant No. 1	Plant No. 2	Plant No. 3

Materials

- 3 identical plants
- 3 different light sources
- 3 graduated cylinders
- 3 beakers
- 3 rulers
- 3 stopwatches

Results

The results of the experiment show that the amount of water absorbed by the plants is directly related to the amount of light they receive. The plant that received the most light absorbed the most water, while the plant that received the least light absorbed the least water.

Procedure

1. Set up three identical plants in separate containers.

2. Place each plant under a different light source (low, medium, and high).

3. Measure the amount of water in each container at the start of the experiment.

4. After a set period of time, measure the amount of water in each container again.

5. Calculate the difference in water levels for each plant.

Conclusion

The experiment proved that the amount of light a plant receives has a direct effect on the amount of water it absorbs. This supports the hypothesis that more light leads to more water absorption.
